GAY MEN MAY BE DIFFERENT BIOLOGICALLY

In a study published in the journal Science, researchers at the State University of New York recently reported that they have found the first clear laboratory evidence of biological differences between homosexual and heterosexual men. The team of scientists, headed by Dr. Brian A. Gladue, found that patterns of response after the hormone estrogen was injected into a group of homosexual men were different than those of heterosexual men and women.

Gladue said the findings, which will undoubtedly prove to be controversial, will prove useful for research purposes in understanding the origins of sexuality. He emphasized that he did not feel they should be developed as a diagnostic test for homosexuality. While homosexual men as a group differed from heterosexual men in the study, not all homosexual men showed the same responses, so the test would not be a reliable indicator of whether a person has homosexual tendencies.

There has been a long debate over whether environment or biology plays a bigger role in determining homosexual behavior. Earlier scientific studies of a difference nature had been inconclusive in tracing possible biological differences.

In this study, scientists measured subtle differences in hormones produced by glands in the brain that are important in regulating sexual functioning in both men and women. They tracked the levels of luteinizing (LH) hormone following stimulation by the hormone estrogen. They found that 12 women who said they were heterosexual showed a consistent response pattern, with LH levels initially decreasing and then shooting back up. None of the 17 heterosexual men in the study showed such rises. The homosexual men, however, showed greater variability, with 9 of the 14 tested showing LH elevations.

There were also differences in response patterns among the homosexual and heterosexual men in levels of the male sex hormone testosterone.

Gladue cautioned that his work should not be used for social purposes. Jeffery Levi, Washington representative of the National Gay Task Force, however, said that scientific proof that homosexuality has a biological base eventually might be used either to bolster arguments for civil-rights protection or as a "tool to discriminate, a way of scientifically finding out who is gay and who is not gay."

SANDRA GILLIS APPOINTED LIAISON FOR MONDALE

In what may well be an unprecedented effort, Walter Mondale is making a strong attempt to win the votes of homosexuals. He has appointed a member of his campaign staff, Sandra Gillis, as a full-time liaison to the gay community. No other presidential candidate has ever assigned an aide to deal with homosexuals.

In contrast, the Reagan campaign does not have such a liaison, and a campaign spokesperson has said that no consideration has ever been given to the creation of such a position.

A member of the Mondale staff for nearly a year already, Gillis has been active with National Organization for Women chapters in New York and Virginia. She is not well known in gay and lesbian circles. However, some activist leaders say Gillis will be effective in her new job because of her long association with the Mondale staff.

Gillis will handle, among other duties, outreach and voter-registration programs to gain the help of the gay community in the November election.

CALIFORNIA COURT REFUSES TO HALT COMPENSATION

The California State Supreme Court has refused to halt a $25,000 worker's compensation benefit to a Los Angeles County man for the death of his male lover.

The State Compensation Insurance Fund had sought to reverse a state Workers' Compensation Appeals Board ruling approving the payment. Four votes were needed for the seven-member court to hear the case; however, there was only one vote to grant the hearing.

The benefits were paid for the suicide in 1976 of a man who had worked for Los Angeles County as a lawyer since 1947. He had applied for worker's compensation in 1973, citing a job-related nervous condition, and was declared totally and permanently disabled by the state in 1976, several months before his death.

After his death, his lover and roommate of 20 years applied for the $25,000 death benefit as a dependent, saying he qualified as a good-faith member of the dead man's household.

After several rulings and appeals, the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board decided last November that the suicide could be attributed to the lawyer's work-related nervous condition and that his lover, with no other source of income, qualified.

WAS THE CARDINAL REALLY GAY?

According to an unpublished biography of the late Francis Cardinal Spellman, the former Archbishop of New York from 1939 to 1976 was gay and his sexual adventures were a source of embarrassment to many Catholics.

Publication of The American Pope by the New York Times Company has been delayed while author John Cooney produces proof of his allegations. In the book he quotes several people who say they knew, but not from first-hand knowledge, that Spellman was an active homosexual.

Cooney says that he did talk to one man who said he had an affair with Spellman, but didn't include it in the book because it didn't seem important.

Spellman's former private secretary, Msgr. Eugene Clark, called the charges "foolish." He added that the story first "surfaced in the homosexual press, which claimed that everybody from Moses on up was a homosexual."

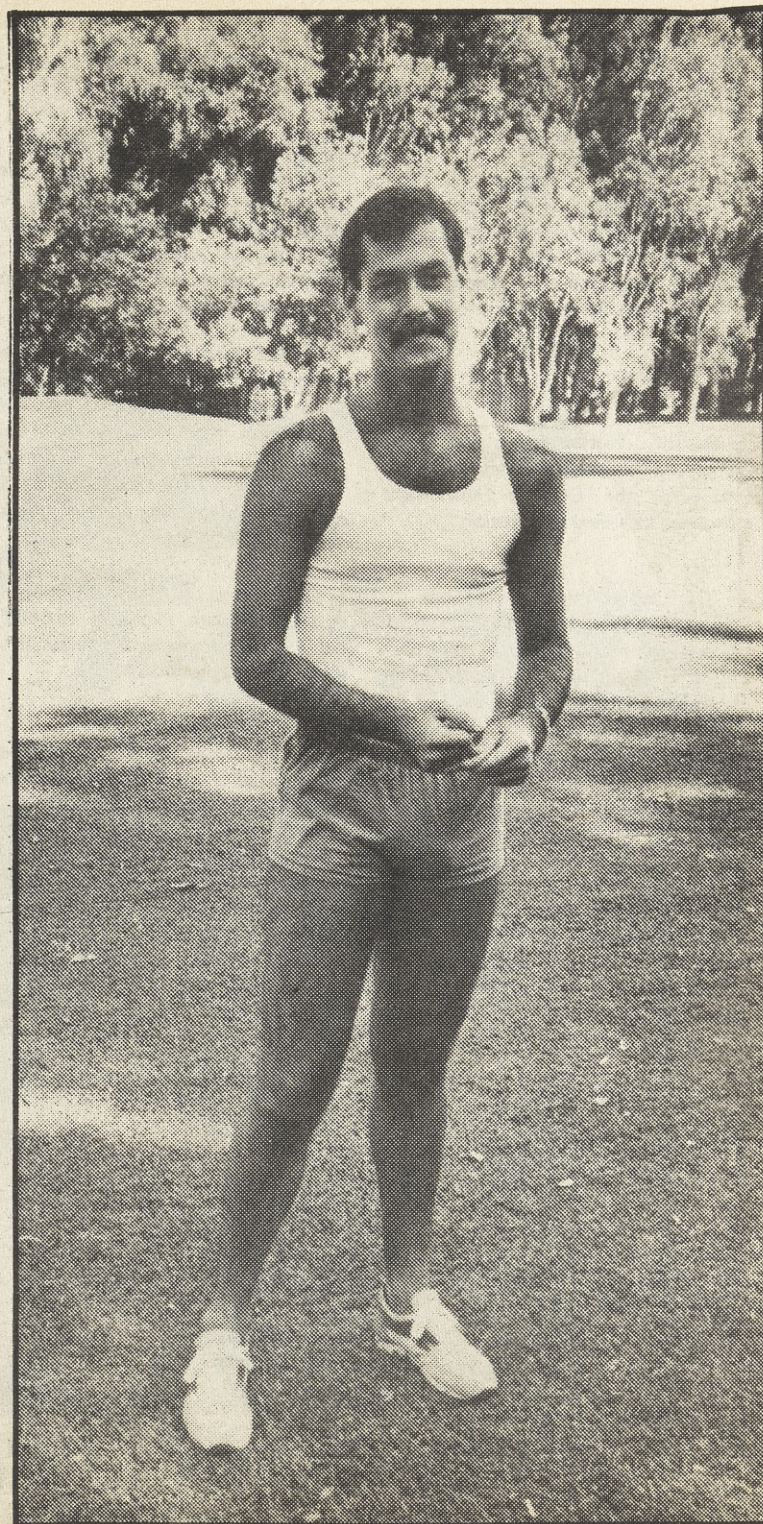

FBI ACCUSED OF SPYING ON GAYS

A Los Angeles civil-liberties attorney, John Heilman, recently announced that FBI documents reveal that the bureau spied on gay and lesbian groups in major cities throughout the US during the 1950s and 1960s.

Heilman said that the documents, obtained under the Freedom of Information Act, show that federal agents and informants infiltrated homosexual groups in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle, San Diego, Denver, Chicago, New York, and New Haven. Groups that came under surveillance included the Mattachine Society, the Daughters of Bilitis, the Gay Activists Alliance, the Gay Liberation Front, the National Gay Task Force, and the National Gay Rights Lobby.

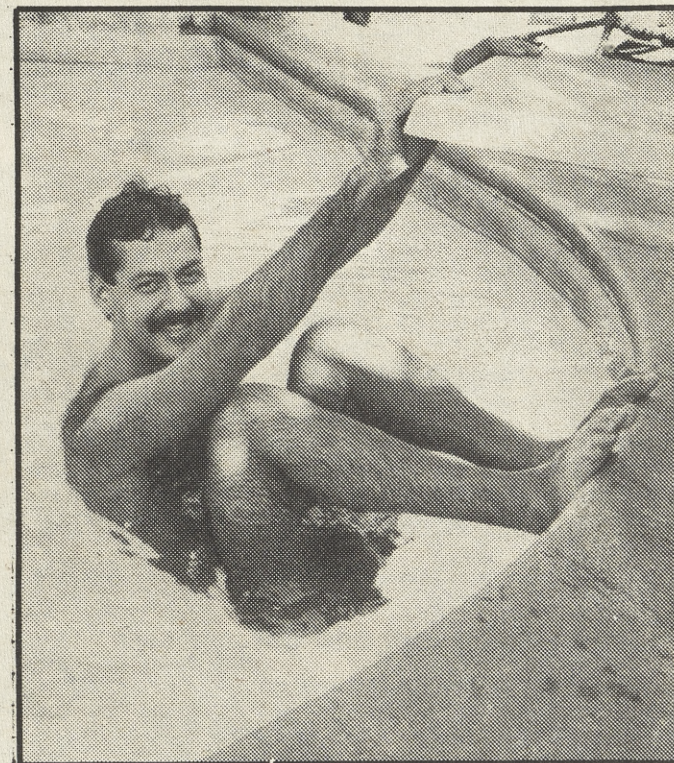

GAY VOTERS AROUND

A recent report by U.S. News and World Report listed homosexuals as the seventh largest block of voters in the United States, with 17 million potential members. The report also noted that gays and lesbians had more electoral power than Hispanics, Jews, and farmers combined.

Letter To The Editor

Dear Editor:

I have been reading the PATLAR for some time now, and I would like to congratulate everyone who contributes to it.

When I first started reading this paper, I used to skim its contents as I do those of most gay periodicals, searching for something of interest. But the PATLAR has grown with the passage of time, and its writers, photographers, and staff have improved their work amazingly. I now find myself reading every issue from cover to cover.

And what covers! If I ever saw someone like Scott (August issue) hitchhiking, I would break my golden rule and stop, with all brakes screaming, to help resolve his plight.

I find the editorials brief, to the point, and interesting. The humor is light and unpretentious, and even the advice column Listening to Lavender, which is one of my favorites, is lighthearted and laudable.

I would just like to say to each and every one of you: Thank You for making the PATLAR my favorite periodical.

Sincerely,

D.C.L.

HIGH TECH GAYS FILE SUIT

A group called "High-Tech Gays" recently filed suit in federal court claiming homosexuals are subjected to intense discriminatory background investigations by the Defense Department when they seek security clearance.

Security clearances are needed by employees of private businesses that do work for the Defense Department involving classified information.

The class-action suit contends the Defense Industrial Security Clearance Office automatically denies clearance for homosexuals. However, some homosexuals have been able to get Secret and Top Secret clearances, but only after lengthy, detailed background checks.

HEALTH NEWS

Bad News About Poppers

Researchers in Cleveland have announced that evidence indicates that the inhalation of certain agents, including amyl and butyl nitrites, lowers T-helper cells while increasing T-suppressor cells.

Dr. A. A. Gerblin reported that levels of helper T-cells, vital to the body's defense mechanism against infections and viruses, were decreased for at least 72 hours immediately after inhalation, while the levels of suppressor T-cells, which suppress disease fighters, showed increases for 78 hours.

The effect of using such chemicals in conjunction with exposure to AIDS-causing agents may cause a person to be more susceptible to AIDS.

Gays and Anorexia

A recent study reported in the American Journal of Psychiatry links homosexuality with eating disorders among men. It suggests that both bulimia and anorexia nervosa are more common among males than previously thought.

The scientists, who are affiliated with Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston, think that eating disorders may be caused by psychological conflicts the subjects feel about their sexuality and a cultural pressure within the homosexual community to be thin.

The study involved 27 males treated for eating disorders. Investigators found "significantly more homosexuality among male patients with eating disorders than among females. It is possible," the authors wrote, "that the cultural pressure on the homosexual male to be thin and attractive places him at greater risk of eating disorders."

New Form Of Hepatitis Reported

A deadly form of hepatitis caused by two viruses that act together in a previously undetected manner has been discovered. The disease, called delta hepatitis, was discovered in Venezuelan Indians by a team of US and Venezuelan researchers.

Delta hepatitis results from a virus that is not dangerous by itself. But when it combines with another virus—the one that causes hepatitis B—the two viruses can cause an illness more severe than that caused by hepatitis B virus alone.

Medical authorities noted that delta hepatitis infections are as yet rare among gay women and men, although hepatitis B infections are fairly common in the gay community.

Major Advance In AIDS Research

Scientists in California have successfully grown (cloned) in the laboratory the full set of genes for the virus believed to cause AIDS.

Cloning the genes of the virus is considered an important step in the research aimed at developing a treatment for AIDS. Now that the genes have been cloned, they can be grown in large quantities. Such laboratory-grown substances might be used for improved diagnostic tests or as a vaccine against the disease.

The report of the successful cloning was made by scientists of the Chiron Corporation, which is a biotechnology company.

AIDS Not A True Disease

It was reported recently at a symposium of the American Association of Physicians for Human Rights that AIDS is not a disease in and of itself, but rather the last stage of a disease. The term which was used to describe the whole spectrum of the disease is ARC, which stands for "AIDS-Related Complex."

While many persons are exposed to the cause of AIDS, few show any symptoms of immune deficiency at all, and even fewer contract an opportunistic infection which would cause them to be diagnosed as having AIDS.

Listening To Lavender

Dear Lavender,

I'm hurt. My name is Marjorie and I've worked in this office now for years and have always been the only woman here named Marjorie. Recently they hired another woman also named Marjorie.

This new dame is a young, curvaceous, blonde, empty-headed sexpot. Most of the men pay her a lot of attention. I don't mind that because I realize that when word gets out that she's a rip-snorting dyke, they won't continue to be so interested. In the meantime, what I do mind is that now those dudes all refer to her as "Marjorie" and to me as "the other Marjorie."

Lavender, don't you agree that it's unfair? Because of my seniority, shouldn't they call me "Marjorie" and her "the other Marjorie?" Eloise, my lover, thinks that I'm making a mountain out of a molehill. Be that as it may, I still feel hurt.

Sincerely,
Marjorie
(Evanston)

My dear Marjorie,

Who ever said that life is fair? In my infinite wisdom, I can only relate how grand it would be to be the "other Marjorie" and not the "other woman." Granted, the "new Marjorie" will soon have her mettle tested (and her work abilities), and you will have your day.

Quit spending your energy on what a name is—a Marjorie by any other name is bound to show its thorns. Sharpen your nails and hang in there.

Dear Ms. Cantello,

When I broke up with Sylvia, I did some hard thinking. I decided that now that I'm free that I should do my own thing. And that includes NOT doing some things that I've always hated doing.

When Sylvia and I were together, I was the one who always did the cooking simply because if we ate, someone had to cook. And Sylvia couldn't boil water. So I decided to give up cooking. It was one of the best decisions I've ever made, and it's one decision that I won't be changing.

Naturally, now that I don't cook, under no circumstances will I consider accepting an invitation to go to someone else's home, because if I do, there's bound to be food and I don't want to be in a position to feel that I have to reciprocate. (What a relief after all the meals I fixed for Sylvia and her pals who always worked up such enormous appetites overhauling trucks and building barns.)

My problem is that people keep sniping at me because I no longer accept invitations to parties. How would you suggest that I get the message across to such well-meaning people that I'm happy the way I am and that I no longer can even boil water?

Yours truly,
Loretta
(Pasadena, TX)

Loretta,

Just tell them! However, you'll suffer for it in the long run. Obviously, people think enough of you to want to have your company. Your problem is with Sylvia, NOT your friends. But, before long, you'll find you have neither.

Dear Madame Cantello:

My lover, Volker, was born in Germany. He's a swell guy and has a nice long cock. Nothing to complain about there.

But you see, Madame, in Germany they circumsized cocks differently than they do here in the USA. They simply cut a slit down one side so that the foreskin will be loose and pliable. It's not very aesthetic to say the least.

Madame Cantello, how would you suggest that I go about getting my Volker to have himself re-circumsized in the American fashion? I've suggested the possibility to him, of course, but he maintains that the American-style cir-

THE KITCHEN FAIRY

COCK TAILS AND AND WHORE D'OEUVRES:

Cheers, dears! There must be a bit of the bartender in me (oooh!), but I do so love to whip up the concoctions that lead to debauchery! I simply adore the wittiness, the repartee, the witchiness, the bitchiness, the gropes, the hopes, the inhibitions fallen away, the lost virtues produced by a good cocktail party!

But alas and alack, despite the infinite variety of cocktails inviting the tongue to experiment and savour, I find myself drowning in a sea of jug wine. How utterly boring! And how utterly, positively uplifting is the art of Cock Tails and Whore d'oeuvres carefully selected to complement each other, the moment, the mood. To put it succinctly, I'll take a good stiff one any time!

To preserve what I see as an expiring art form, and just in time for Trick Is Treat, I raise high my swizzle stick and present three of my favorite Cock Tail and Whore d'oeuvre combinations designed to delight the palate and put a Buzz on! (Buzz is so obliging, especially after The Glory Hole!)

So, bottoms up boys! Here's looking at you and at:

Your Campaign—Not Theirs

Someone once observed about political candidates that "the only difference in all their rout, is them's that's in and them's that's out" of office.

In one sense, we can look at the two major political parties and see them as two teams—very much like one another—vying for the big majority of voters who lie in a vast political center. Or, if some recent trend spotters are correct, we might take the view that the two-party system is undergoing a major fundamental change, the outcome of which will be a Democratic Party clearly more liberal, and the Republican Party clearly very much more conservative.

Our purpose is not to discuss the relative merits and drawbacks of either the liberal or conservative philosophies. Most people, regardless of their sexual orientation, probably have mixed philosophies. For example, a person can be liberal when it comes to social policy, yet conservative about government spending.

What we would like to do is outline some thoughts about how to choose a candidate for political office. As gay and lesbian people, what are some of the elements to make up a standard by which we choose candidates? Let's go exploring by asking a few questions.

Should I vote a straight ticket? There's absolutely nothing wrong with straight party ticket voting. If you believe that a particular party best represents your interests overall, by all means vote the party line. What you are choosing in the long run are not candidates, but an overall point of view that you hope the individual candidates will support.

Should I split the ticket? If you believe that "voting for the person" will result in better representation of your views, then by all means vote the candidate. Most people do cross party lines when they vote. They recognize that sometimes an individual who is a member of a different party can be more in tune with their views than the candidate of their own party.

What about campaign promises? Take campaign promises lightly. No one in his or her right mind believes that any candidate for public office—especially one running for a particular office for the first time—will be able to perform as that person thought. Unless a candidate has actually held the office for which he or she is seeking election, that person cannot know the total dimensions of holding that office. Until elected, a candidate remains an outsider.

What about the record? Nearly every candidate for public office has some kind of past record, whether it be votes, public statements, or actions which can give solid clues about how he or she will perform and what views will be supported once in office. If you notice a candidate who says one thing to one group and something else to another, or who is terribly evasive, then you know that person must speak with a forked tongue. Support someone else.

Should I always support the gay candidate? Thank whomever, more out-of-the-closet gays and lesbians are running for and being elected to office. Each candidate, regardless of sexual orientation, however, should be weighed on his or her ability to perform and be effective. In one city I know of, there is a perennial candidate for various public offices who happens to be gay. The voters wisely have not elected that person to office. Why? Because he is incompetent to hold elective office.

MODERN MUSIC

by Michael J. Maier

(Note: This is the introduction to a series of record reviews, which will appear during the next few months. Mr. Maier has been a professional disc jockey around the country now for 13 years. A native of New England and a graduate of Boston University, he now resides in the San Francisco Bay area where he continues his record-spinning career.)

Noise Without Nonsense

What evokes the music we hear today? It is retrospectively fresh, clean, innovative, and alive. It is more alive than it has ever been with the exception of during the Sixties.

Socially and musically, there is a similar coalition between the Eighties and the Sixties. The Sixties witnessed a change in social attitudes which was mounted in part by the sweep of a new musical wave referred to today as the first British rock invasion.

Each period has or had its separate turbulent and/or peaking moments—socially, politically, and musically. They do have, however, degrees of parallels such as social changes, political unrest, mass exploitation, and glitter (for lack of a better word).

Now the cry goes out again that the British are coming. (Better the British than the Russians.) This call is nearly too late, for the British are already here in strong force—musically and socially. This is shown by the fact that on July 16, 1983, eighteen singles by British acts appeared on the American Top 40, surpassing the previous record set on June 19, 1965.

The Sixties were the days of Herman's Hermits, The Dave Clark Five, The Yarbroughs, and the immortal Beatles—still unsurpassed even by this second wave of British rockers with their long hair, cheeky wit, and pell-mell rock n' roll sound. Each group that came forth from the Sixties was cute, fresh, and in retrospect, youthfully innocent. Today's lot evokes savvy; the sound produced by these groups is an interesting mix of new and old. A fusion sound which represents an understanding of its musical and social past with a positive neoteric future. It's done with less clamor of the guitar, lambent harmo-nies, and an animate public image which is reflected in such groups as Culture Club, ABC, Talk Talk, Eurythmics, Duran Duran, New Order, U2, Public Image, Ltd., Ultravox, and the Thompson Twins, which shows the strong visual importance in pop music today.

The mood is at times saturnine and lightly arrogant. Singers sometimes transmit a techno enigma of modern society. The entire audio-visual package offered by today's new breed of bands is enthusiastically welcomed by Americans with open arms and wallets.

The sensation and sound of modern music depicts a realistic image of present day lifestyles. The synthesizer represents the hi-tech and impersonal aspects of today's world which touches us all. The imagery and styles portray the sharp and defined boundaries we live in, while the up-beat alloy sound mirrors the economic revitalization which is embracing the mid-Eighties.

What seems to be a most characterizing fact, which appeared to have ushered in at the start of the economic upturn, is the birth of so many new bands and the career boost of many established American acts and singers who have jumped on the musical bandwagon once again. Such groups as Duran Duran, Eurythmics, Culture Club, Talk Talk, Cyndi Lauper, Men At Work, Romeo Void, Shannon and Madonna have all made important first impacts on American music. Artists and groups as Bruce Springsteen, Deniece Williams, Donna Summer, Rod Stewart, Elton John, Michael Jackson, Prince,

The Police, The Pretenders, Van Halen, The Go Gos have either contributed to or enjoy a resurgence in success due to the new musical wave.

As to the by and by of this beat, one has to have an understanding of how it obtained a foothold into the American market. So subtle was its influx that it crept through the back door of American pop culture unknown to the general masses. The dance music media helped this infantile form to its present strong levels of acceptance giving the sagging multinational record companies a long overdue shot in the arm. It is ironic that the same music facet—dance music—"disco"—which accompanied and in many aspects contributed to the record companies' woes also brought a bustling and brisk upturn in this same genre. In many cases, 60% of past and present American Top 40 made there way onto the chart from introduction through a newly revived dance music market. A larger percentage (85%-97%) that has occupied the Top 20 in the past year has been dance oriented product: modern (rock), r&b, jazz, and contemporary.

This current pop heavyweight in view of present evidence should continue to enjoy a healthier growth and lifespan than the "disco" era.

This article is not about the success or failure of disco, but a review of present music trends. I only mention disco in passing because of the similarities that today's pop music market borrows from that period. The length of this musical upturn will depend greatly on the record companies.

It was these companies that were partly responsible for the death of disco. A good portion of the downturn in disco was due to sub-standard records which were released by major record labels that created a negative attitude by consumers toward the music industry. That same thing is happening again, but on a smaller scale.

As for the immediate future of the pop music industry, there are no signs of any slowdown. All indications are that records will keep coming and the dollars will continue to flow from the hands of music hungry consumers.

IT'S ALL IN YOUR HEAD

by Galan Moon
(Age 82)

In a recent edition of a national newspaper, a long article by a famous personality appeared under the heading: AGING AIN'T ALL IT'S CRACKED UP TO BE.

The main thing that I got out of this famous personality's descriptions of his views of growing older was that he's one scared human being. He thinks his body and his mental faculties and his emotions have to deteriorate and waste away. That he must suffer losses and limitations which will make him a tiresome, if not handicapped, person.

I'll bet everything that his anticipation will come true because none of us can thwart that universal law which produces just what we ask for. Fulfilled prophecies.

The author of the article carefully avoided stating his age, but a few choices of words here and there caused me to suspect that he has not reached "old age." For instance, this paragraph:

"A month this year, May, was designated national Senior Citizen Month. It is proper that the aging should be recognized and celebrated. Senior Citizens should be praised because they are able to rise above their limitations and live life fully. We should honor the elderly who are still growing, productive and glowing, despite the restrictions they encounter as they age."

Seems to me there is something wrong with such thinking. Why should we be "honored," "praised," "celebrated" because we don't conform to his picture of "the elderly?" And why should the editor of a prestigious national newspaper foist onto its readers such a bunch of debilitating, downgrading ideas?

No research data, no statistics of any kind, no authoritative quotes, just a run on about what this guy expects his later years to be.

Why couldn't he have said: It doesn't have to be that way? No matter how far along the years you are, you can do things to make the remaining ones less gruesome, less painful, less threatening?

That's what I say over and over again. What you find in the days ahead will be, or is, what you put there. No one else patterned the contents of your todays. You did it with the pictures within your being of what old age is all about. You created the senility or the expanding intellectualism being displayed in those last days. And, you can change that blueprint any time you decide it is not appropriate for you.

Of course, if you have cast the foundation in cement and built on that with stone and mortar, remodeling may be difficult—but not impossible. You can gradually remove the iron bars from the windows and replace the heavy drapes with sheers which allow pleasing glimpses of happy people and inspiring scenes. I've known a couple of people who have recovered good health and self-esteem simply by acting on the belief that the paramount purpose of living is to share confidence and beauty and joy with other humans.

To share, one has to unlock the selfishness door. Once that is done, it is surprising how much treasured but absolutely worthless junk will be swept into the trash barrel.

PHILOSOPHY

by Philip Ewoldsen

I grew up with all kinds of cultural role expectations. I learned early on that boys don't cry and that they do play sports. I grew up with an awareness of what our culture expected of me as a male, and I bought into those expectations. I worked hard at fulfilling the roles—I became the son, husband, father, lover, friend I was supposed to be.

But the older I got, the more I knew some of those expectations were phony for me. I discovered that I was trying so hard to fit into all those categories that there was not time for me, for my personal needs and wants. It's really easy to get caught in that bind between those family and cultural expectations and our own needs and satisfactions. I know it took me a long time before I could finally begin to move toward becoming the real man that was in me.

Our culture tends to be very homophobic. Men are afraid to be close to other men—someone might think they are "queer." Men are not supposed to be close—that's less than manly, and so we get caught, trapped into being the strong, silent John Wayne types, never escaping and becoming our real selves.

Now those of us who accept our gayness (and that goes for men and women both) don't have to worry about all that—or do we? We admit we're gay, we can get close to others, it won't matter if they think we're "queer." But how many of us still are afraid to get close to other men? We know we don't have to be like non-gay men, but we've still internalized that message. So too often, rather than working toward self-acceptance and understanding, we get sidetracked into an almost compulsive search for sex. It's not know and appreciate and get close to other men, it's find and ejaculate and use other men—and we're no better off than the non-gay man fighting his impulses and unable to accept himself or get close to and love his brother.

We have a choice. We can buy those cultural molds that make "real he-men" of us—and suffer and use and be alone, or we can work at being open and appreciate others, find support and acceptance with other men, discover new ways of understanding ourselves, and in the process escape from being "real he-men" and become "real men."

HAIR CARE

by Philippe Reynolds

Self-improvement involves inner improvement, and just as importantly, outer improvement. Let's face it; when we look good, we generally feel good, too. We all strive to project the "real me." Hair is perhaps the main concern of many people and can be the most difficult to control.

The first step to easy manageability and control of hair starts with the sculpt. Sculpted properly for the desired style, your hair will be responsive. It does make a big difference!

Your best bet is to cut out and take a picture for your cosmetologist to see. It is much easier for him/her to get understand what you want that way. Believe me, it is much easier than watching your hands flying around in the air saying, "Short here, not too much there, or, leave it a little long right there." Remember, too, that not every hair style is best for you because facial features have a lot to do with the overall look.

With that in mind, manageability starts with the condition of your hair. There are basically three types of hair: dry, oily, and normal.

Dry hair means your hair lacks amino acids (protein), usually resulting in "fly away" hair. On the other hand, if your hair is limp and lifeless, your hair has too much moisture. This causes over elasticity (the amount of stretchability to the hair) which will result in equally unmanageable hair.

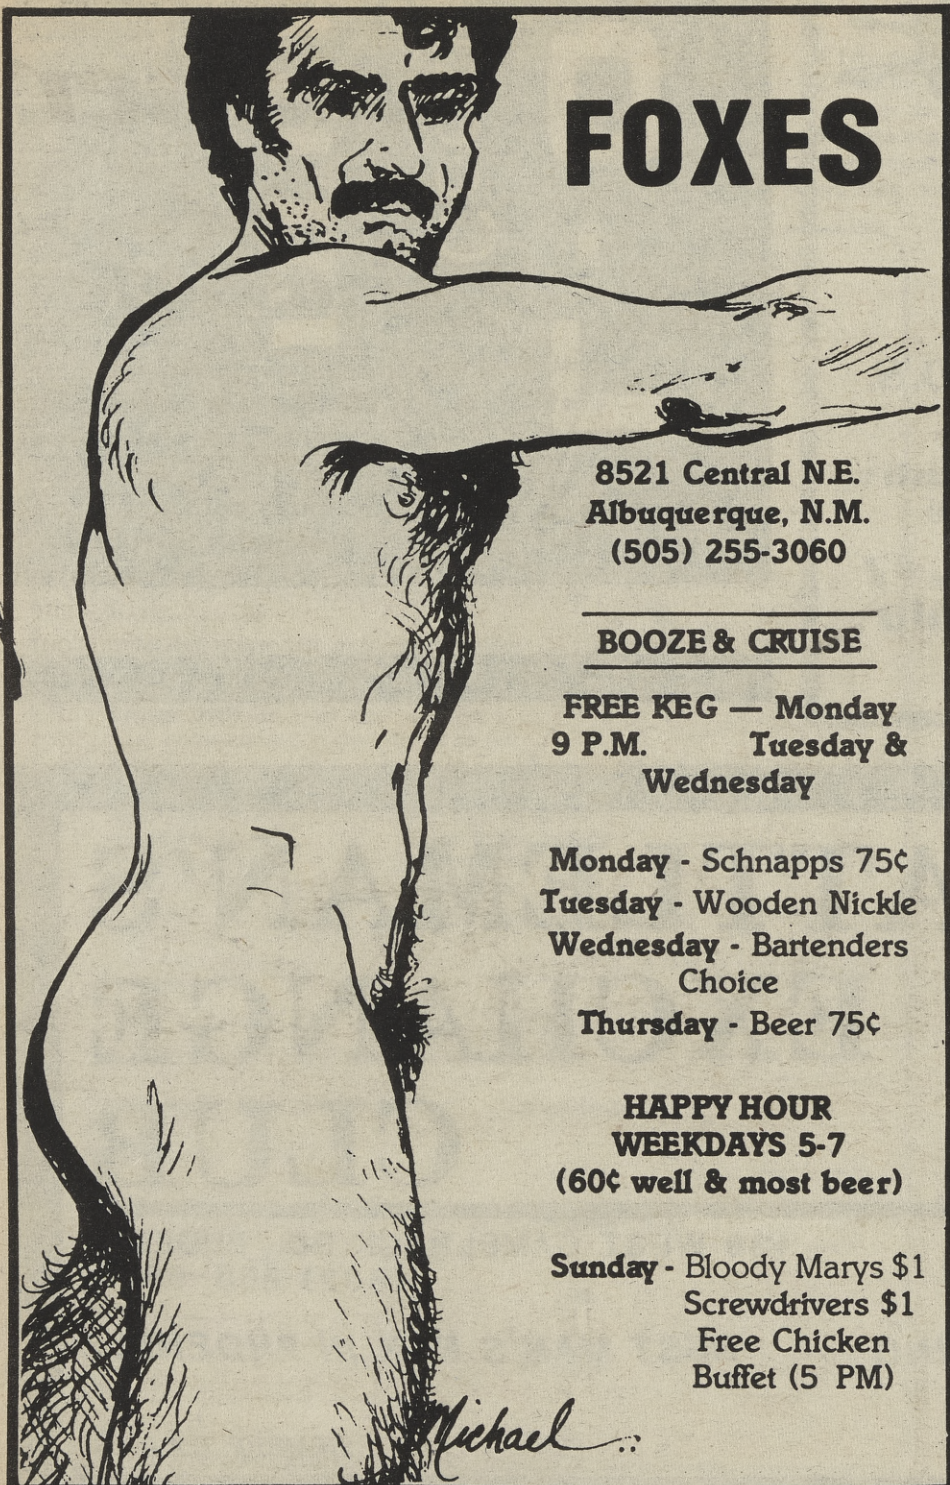

There are several things that can be done for your hair in either instance. In returning your hair to a "normal" condition, your choice of shampoos and conditioners plays the largest role. For dry hair, which has been stripped of its protein, you need a very mild shampoo to avoid taking away any more protein. For a treatment, I suggest a "rebuilding" conditioner. This treats damaged hair by entering the cuticle and depositing protein in the cortex. This builds the hair back up and gives it elasticity once again. Don't confuse the rebuilder with other rinses.

For hair that has too much moisture, a shampoo for oily hair is needed. If you already use a moisturizing shampoo, you might try switching to a shampoo for normal or normal-to-oily hair. If you need an after treatment, try a light cream rinse. All a rinse will do is coat the hair, making the cuticle (the outermost layer) lay down. This is what gives your hair a shine.

Any store that sells chemical hair products has a licensed cosmetologist on the staff, so if you are not certain what is best for you, just ask.

Note: Questions pertaining to cosmetology should be sent to Philippe Reynolds, c/o PATLAR GAZETTE, PO Box 22402, Sacramento, CA 95822.

ALTERNATIVE HISTORY: A DIFFERENT DIRECTION

DAVID STEVENS
—KOREAN WAR ERA—

by Steven Ryan

The seduction of the All-American Male is a favorite fantasy of both gays and gals alike. The young David Stevens would have been a real prize at any present-day American gay or singles bar.

A former track and field star at Southside Senior High School in Ottawa, Illinois, David was that cute boy-next-door type. Close-cropped blond hair, blue eyes, ruddy complexion, sturdy frame, athletic, and extroverted, he certainly didn't fit the old gay stereotypes. When he was sixteen, he dated flighty cheerleaders and church-going babysitters, and he lost his virginity at age seventeen. He also sucked cock on the sly in the town's railroad yards.

Not all was as it seemed with our high-school dreamboat. David suffered from an egocentric admiration for his own body and the male physique. He recalls walking around school with a hard-on, frequently relieving his erections in the shower room with a couple of buddies (after a six-pack of beer on a party night, any back parking lot would do). His best friend, Tim, would always come first, while talking about some chick. David admired Tim's sexual prowess with girls and tried to follow his example; but whenever he slept with a girl, he ended up thinking about Tim and their jack-off sessions together.

Teenage horseplay—it didn't mean anything serious to most of the guys. But in his early twenties, as his homosexuality began to dawn on him, David thought of his active youth with a mixture of longing and regret. Tim was now married and respectably employed, and all of the other guys were properly accounted for.

David, however, was hustling a living on the streets of Chicago. He worked for an escort service and capitalized on his good looks. He was often handsomely paid for small favors by lonely women who hung onto his arm at high-class functions. An occasional homosexual liaison was dismissed as a temporary aberration.

In 1950, the Korean War flared up and before long David got drafted into the service. He was as patriotic as the next fellow. He was involved in some of the heaviest fighting of the entire war. A battlefield injury earned him a purple heart and six weeks in a military hospital. It was there that he fell in love for the first time in his life...with a Greek male nurse. The Greek had no qualms about seducing the beautiful blond American, and a relationship developed. Though it was a short-lived affair, it was pretty wild for David.

After the war, David returned to Illinois with a greater sense of who and what he was. The Greek had convinced him that he was gay.

Life after Korea seemed a little dull, so with nothing better to do, David reenlisted in the army, tentatively planning a military career. He was able to travel, which he liked, but true love remained elusive. The army and homosexuality, however, were not compatible bedmates.

David left the service in 1958, and decided to go to college. He was 29 years old wanted a career and a lover—not necessarily in that order. He attended the University of Florida at Gainesville where he hoped to become a student of veterinary medicine. His grandparents lived nearby making the first lonely months bearable.

After three years of college (and several insignificant boyfriends) and tired of being a poor student in a hick town, he left Gainesville for the beaches of southern Florida. In Miami he worked as a salesclerk, waiter, truck driver, and model. He hustled the streets between jobs and kept a nice apartment. After a phase of drugs and alcohol, he settled down and kept his body in shape at a local spa. He loved the beaches and had a year-round suntan. He was able to command a pretty good price at exclusive gay parties.

David met a popular drag-queen at one of those parties, and they developed an unusual friendship. Desmona worked as a stage performer but didn't earn enough money to pay her rent. She (or he) fell madly in love with David and eventually moved in with him—as a roommate. David wasn't sexually interested in Desmona, but she seemed to be very sensitive to his needs. Desmona stayed for about ten months. But David wouldn't sleep with her, so she finally moved out. They remained friends, however, for several years until Desmona moved to New York City and disappeared.

David moved to California in '67, a pretty radical time of hippies, drugs, ghetto riots, and anti-war demonstrations. But the emerging gay scene was exciting, so he settled down in the Bay Area for several years and became somewhat of a radical himself, participating in campus demonstrations and a sit-in.

He missed Florida, however—the hot sun, white beaches, and friendly neighbors—so he returned there and has never moved away again. He finally found a man to share his life, and they've been together now for nine years.

David has become very active in the gay scene and hopes to start a gay newspaper in the northern part of Florida next year. He's also been instrumental in serving on a committee that has worked as a liaison between the gay bars and the Jacksonville city police, ending harassment and initiating cooperation. At 55 years old, he admits to a rewarding and busy life.

CROSSROADS

BRIDGING COMMUNITIES THROUGHOUT AMERICA

SANTA FE

Sante Fe, hideaway for stars such as Helen Hayes, David Bowie, and Amy Irving, has something to offer the weary tourist as he makes his way through the tiny streets filled with Indian and Mexican street merchants.

Victor's is a very popular dining place that caters to the gay crowd.

The Chase offers an exclusively gay setting. The restaurant opens at 6:00 AM for breakfast and offers fine Mexican cuisine six days a week (closed until noon Sunday). The establishment has four sections: the restaurant, the quiet bar, the disco, and a very nice show-room. The Santa Fe Opera and the Ballet are quite well known; many of the opera and dance people drop into The Chase to view the drag shows.

CHEYENNE

Coffeehouses are held each second and fourth Tuesday nights at the Izaak Walton Hall, adjacent to Pioneer Park, in Cheyenne. There are refreshments and socializing.

On October 27, the Tri-State Lambda Halloween Dance and costume party will be held, starting at 8 PM, at Hynds Lodge west of Cheyenne. There will be cash prizes.

On November 27, the Tri-State Lambda anniversary party and comedy show will be held at Izaak Walton Hall.

For more information about Tri-State Lambda, write PO Box 1542 Cheyenne, WY 82001.

SAN DIEGO

Civil-rights attorney and gay activist Thomas Homann resigned recently from the Police Liaison Committee in San Diego. This committee was organized early this year to promote communication between the local gay community and the Police Department.

In his resignation letter, Homann wrote, "My principal concern is that the committee is being used by the police department to create an appearance that 'leadership' in the gay community approves of special police operations in the parks which have resulted in scores of gay men arrested for allegedly soliciting or engaging in lewd conduct in public. Most emphatically I do not approve of these police operations."

Iris Glen is a feminist camp which offers an opportunity for women to live informally as a community of women. Women of all ages, races, ethnic backgrounds, and sexual preferences are welcome. Facilities include lodges and platform tent units with centralized dining. Primitive sites are also available. Located on the South River four miles from Annapolis, MD, the camp is easily accessible from Washington, DC and Baltimore. Disabled women can be accommodated and may bring a support person at reduced rates.

For additional information, write the Iris Glen Feminist Camp, PO Box 265, Edgewater, MD 21037.

LANSING

After many weeks of work by several Lansing Association for Human Rights (LAHR) officers, the organization has submitted an application to the Internal Revenue Service for an exemption which will permit them to receive grants from private foundations and will also allow contributors to LAHR to claim those contributions as deductions on their incomes taxes.

For more information about LAHR, call (517) 337-7825.

BATON ROUGE

A federal appeals court recently upheld the assignment by Louisiana State University of a lesbian graduate assistant to non-teaching duties. A suit was filed last August on behalf of Kristine Naragon, a straight-A student pursuing a doctorate at the College of Music who was removed from her teaching duties after the parents of an undergraduate student complained to university officials about the homosexual nature of the relationship between Naragon and their daughter. The undergraduate had never been in Naragon's classes.

The 5th Circuit United States Court of Appeals refused to override a lower court decision that Ms. Naragon's homosexuality was not the motivating factor in LSU's action.

In a dissenting opinion, Judge Irving L. Goldberg criticized the majority for failing to address the gay-rights issue in the case. Goldberg said the transcript of the trial showed that LSU had bowed to the wishes of the students parents.

MODESTO

The back of Baldwin's Antiques, 705 I Street, offers a variety of literature on issues which affect gay women and men. Feminist works and children's books are also available in the mostly small-press inventory.

There is a bulletin board that may be used for posting announcements. Hours are 10:00 AM to 5:30 PM seven days a week (occasionally closed for antique shows).

The Woman's Compendium is a monthly publication designed to inform and update women regarding legislation which affects women, to foster networking among women, and to create among women an awareness of their heritage and place in history.

For information, write: Woman's Compendium, PO Box 1651, Modesto, CA 95353.

SIMONTON

The Texas Gay Rodeo is scheduled November 2-4 at the Roundup Arena in Simonton, TX, about an hour's drive from downtown Houston. The location has an excellent rodeo arena with facilities providing food, drink, and dancing.

Houston is the host city and is responsible for staging the rodeo. The Greenway Plaza Holiday Inn will be headquarters. A fleet of buses will operate among the hotels, Houston gay bars, and the Roundup Arena. Simonton is about 50 miles from downtown Houston, and everyone—whether from Houston or from out of town—is encouraged to use the bus facilities.

On Friday, November 2, a barbecue and barn dance will be held at the Roundup. Main performer for the evening will be Stella Parton. Rodeo performances will be held in the afternoon on Saturday and Sunday. The awards ceremonies will be held in the grand ballroom of the Greenway Plaza Holiday Inn Sunday evening, with Kenny Dale performing.

Hotel accommodations, bus transfers, and tickets to the various rodeo events are available locally through Michael E. Terry at Park Boulevard Travel (713) 299-2720.

NEW ORLEANS

New Orleans Gay Men's Chorus has started its third season. Highlights of the season will include appearances at the World's Fair, Christmas concerts, a spring concert at Le Petit Theatre, and a trip to Chicago to participate in that city's Gay Pride Week, as well as a Third Annual Gay Pride Concert.

People interested in singing with the group, playing the piano or guitar, or signing concerts for the hearing impaired are invited to participate. Additional information is available at (504) 529-1146.

HONOLULU

The Sexual Identity Center helps any individual deal with discrimination on the basis of sex or sexual orientation.

Another very important aspect of the Center is its advocacy efforts. It helps to develop and support legislation and public policy to ensure equality and fair treatment of people regardless of sex or sexual orientation. Major areas that the Sexual Identity Center routinely supports are ERA, gay rights, ERA compliance bills, fair housing, and fair-employment practices.

Volunteers help the Center provide its services. Volunteers are needed to provide help with the newsletter, fundraising, carpentry, and office tasks.

To contact the Center, write PO Box 3224, Honolulu, HI 96801 or telephone (808) 926-1000.

EUREKA

There is some interest in the Humboldt (Eureka) area in a men's "over-35" gay support group. Those who want to start this group have recently come out or have been out for just a short while. They would like to meet with others who are in similar situations, as well as those who have been out for a long time, to talk, to share, to learn, and to create in a supportive setting. Anyone interested in joining should call the office of the Humboldt United Gays (HUG).

For more information about HUG, write PO Box 660, Eureka, CA 95502-0660, or telephone (707) 442-5604.

TALLAHASSEE

Sappho's Library, Inc. is conducting a research project on physical violence in lesbian relationships. The study will examine the type of conflict used in lesbian relationships, and will give special emphasis to physical violence.

Participants are not limited to those who have experienced violence in their own relationships. The information will be used for future research in these areas and as educational materials for other women who counsel lesbian couples.

All responses will be strictly confidential. Persons interested in participating should contact: Gail Dixon or Vicki Combs, c/o A.W.A.R.E., 402 E. Park Avenue, Tallahassee, FL 32301.

The Pomona and San Gabriel Valley's Gay and Lesbian Coalition wants persons to volunteer time. People are needed to work on the hotline, provide assistance to the handicapped, and to do office work. To volunteer, phone (714) 620-6608 between 11 AM and 3 PM.

INDIANAPOLIS

Indianapolis gays have formed an organization called Unity which is concerned with bringing the Gay Community out of the closet. The group believes that gay rights, and community acceptance, will come about only through a grass-roots movement of the Gay People. For more information, write Unity, PO Box 434, Indianapolis, IN 46206.

Gays and lesbians have been present in great numbers on the Circle in Indianapolis every Friday lately from 8 PM to 11 PM. The purpose has been to make a gay and lesbian presence felt on the Circle area. That presence has received substantial news media coverage.

Last July 20 there were over 300 gays on the north side of the Circle, with as many as a couple of hundred more on other parts. Also, an estimated 600 gays "cruised" the Circle in autos.

Attendance on the Circle has been smaller since then; however, there have still been an estimated 200 gays each succeeding Friday. Police harassment of gays on the Circle has stopped since the Gay Knights have been active there. No attempts have been made by anyone to hassle the gays.

CINCINNATI

Every year, MCC Cincinnati holds an Annual Art Exhibition Auction to help meet financial commitments. This year, the auction did not take place. The loss of the event has had a detrimental effect on MCC's finances.

The auction house which had to cancel the show has donated a five-piece tea and coffee service to MCC for use in a raffle. Therefore, MCC Cincinnati invites members of the gay/lesbian community to make contributions to MCC Cincinnati, and for each dollar donated, MCC will enter the contributor's name in the drawing for the tea service.

The drawing will be held when the goal of $2,500 has been reached. Anyone wishing to participate may send contributions to MCC Cincinnati, 65 East Hollister, Cincinnati, OH 45219. Make checks payable to MCC Cincinnati. Contributions are tax deductible.

COLLEGE STATION

The Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals recently ruled that Texas A & M University must recognize a gay student group, thus ending an eight-year legal battle. The Court said that not recognizing the group would violate the students' First Amendment guarantee of freedom of association.

In reaching its decision, the Court rejected an amicus-curiae brief from Dallas Doctors Against AIDS which said that recognition of the school's gay student group would increase risk of AIDS on the Texas A & M campus.

OKLAHOMA CITY

The Second Annual Official Mr. Gay All-American Contest was recently held in Oklahoma City. Twenty-four young men worked long hours preparing for this contest, and the results were evident—unbelievable talent competition, flawless formal wear competition, and outstanding swimwear competition.

Winning the title of Mr. Gay All-American 84-85 was Keith Mitchell with the highest all-around score. First Runner Up was Alan Michero with the highest score in swimwear. Second Runner Up was Dan Hagan with the highest scores in formal wear and interview. Mr. Personality went to Jeff Reeves.

SAN FRANCISCO

The San Francisco AIDS Foundation began a Food Bank last year to help with the pressing food needs of people with AIDS. Many people with the disease are unable to continue working and are forced to live on government assistance programs. Often they find themselves living on extremely limited incomes of $15 a week or less, leaving little room to afford the nutritious food that they especially need.

Food Bank provides supplemental food for approximately 50 people with AIDS and AIDS-related conditions. For some, it is their primary source of food. The canned and packaged food donations from community organizations and individuals are needed to continue the service.

Donations can be made at the Foundation offices at 54 Tenth Street (between Market and Mission Streets) or at the following locations.

COMMUNITY THRIFT STORE:
625 Valencia Street
THE INTERNATIONAL DAVID SOCIETY: 2340 Market Street
THE GARDEN: 1960 University Avenue, Palo Alto

Suggested items: canned tuna, canned fruits and juices, packaged meals, cereals, and top ramen.

ST. LOUIS

The Metropolitan Community Church (MCC) of Greater St. Louis has moved to its new location at 1120 Dolman Street. MCC has been meeting in the ballroom of the large Central West End home which served as its church building for the last ten years.

Its congregation has about 130 active members and supports a full-time pastor. MCC also has a Christian Education Department, counseling services, and a complete choral music program.

The church welcomes people who have experienced oppressive judgment of lifestyle in other churches.

The church that MCC is moving into was built in 1870. The site was originally consecrated St. John's Episcopal Church. It became St. Mary's Assumption Ruthian (Russian) Greek Catholic Church around the turn of the century.

The new MCC is located one mile from the central business district of St. Louis and just on the eastern edge of the Lafayette Square neighborhood.

Exterior walls of the nineteenth-century church are made of pressed brick and cut stone trim. The interior is blue and white with ceiling frescoes that depict the Apostles.

MCC's new telephone number is (314) 231-9100.

ERNIE BROWN
VIEWS FROM RIVER CITY

In Memoriam: Charles & Sylvester.

Another long hot summer is behind us. When I say "hot," I mean HOT, like SIZZLING. I am sure you know by now that this was the longest & hottest summer in Sacramento's history. Leave it to us. Now we are facing an unpredictable season: Autumn. Bring it on; we can cope.

Let's look at some of the good things we are going to cope with during October. First of all, there are a lot of new faces and new bars in town, which of course makes coping more enjoyable. So with that in mind, we will move right along.

Coming up at The Forum this month: A queens' delight, bitches' Christmas. You got it: HALLOWEEN. (By the way, early in October, The Forum will reinstate their famous Sunday Brunches, 11:30-2:00. All you can eat for $4.50.) The Forum's Halloween Ball, Wed. Oct. 31, will have as its theme: A Night In Paris. Now hold onto your hats. The Grand Prize winner will receive a seven-day, six-night trip to Paris, France. All expenses paid including flight there & back, six nights in a hotel with continental breakfast. All compliments of The Forum. Merci.

The K Street Saloon is having their Halloween party Sat. Oct. 28. Prizes & Surprises. They are also working on an after-hours that night. Check with them for time and details. Their Monday Nite Jackpot and Movies are gaining momentum.

The GNIE is having their Closet Ball Sat. Oct 27 at The Forum. Door opens at 6:00 PM, show starts at 8:00. The theme of the Closet Ball this year is: Hello Beauty.

I hope by now you have heard about the Heart Transplant Fund that Robert Hoyos (Bobbette) has started in our community for a dear little girl named Lisa Wittnebel. She is nine year old. As of this writing, Lisa has undergone surgery at Stanford University Hospital and is holding her own. The Wittnebel family would greatly appreciate any contributions and/or assistance in helping raise money for Lisa's post-operative care when she returns home. With this in mind, LaKish (Merc) will be holding an auction for little Lisa, Thurs. Oct 11 starting at 8 PM. If you have anything you can contribute to the auction, please do so. Or if you would like to contribute money, you can do that too. Send all contributions to: Robert Hoyos, c/o The Mercantile Saloon, 1928 L St, Sacramento, CA 95816.

The Merc is sponsoring another family feud night, Mon. Oct 29. This time between The Merc & The Buffalo Club. The Western plays the winner.

Speaking of The Western. This is one of our new bars in town. I'm glad to say that it is doing well. As a matter of fact, if you have been looking for those notorious bartenders, Mike Leek & Lala, look no more. They both are employed at The Western, where there is never a cover charge. Tues. spec. ($1 Schnaaps); Wed. night spec. (Buddy Night—buck a beer); Thurs. night spec. ($1 schnaaps puffs). Happy Hour every day, 6 AM until 12 noon. In fact, it's the only bar in our community that opens at 6 AM.

Another one of our newer bars is The Buffalo Club. Mon-Fri, 5-8 PM, Happy Hour. Pitcher of beer $2, draft beer 50¢. There is a buffalo stampede Tues. & Sat: 5-9, all the draft you can drink for $3.50. Congrats Meta & Frank. Welcome back to the community; we missed you.

The Wreck Room is having its Halloween party Wed. Oct. 31. Awards for the best costume. Here is another first; every Sat. afternoon there is a pinball tournament at The Wreck Room, starting at 3 PM.

Paul (Incredible Edible), I sure like the facelift you are giving the restaurant. Don't forget, folks, you can now order your favorite cocktail along with your favorite dish at The Incredible Edible. While there say hello to Katy & Lance.

BoJangles/Scandals are still preparing those beautiful Sunday brunches. Your bartender there is no other than the renowned "Rosa." The male strip show with jockey shorts contest, hosted by Sundance, is going over very big every Sunday night. First prize $75. And with the 69¢ well drinks, $1 call drinks & 5¢ draft beer, don't tell me you can't afford it. It's a steal.

NEW YORK

William Thom, 43, was sworn in recently as the first openly gay judge in New York State. Thom, a gay-rights advocate from Manhattan, was sworn in to an interim term as a Civil Court judge by Mayor Edward Koch. The interim appointment expires at the end of the year.

Thom describes his appointment as "a victory for human rights for all citizens of New York."

Thom founded the Lambda Legal Defense and Education Fund, the nation's largest homosexual legal-rights organization, and was chairman of the American Bar Association's Subcommittee on the Rights of Gay People from 1976 to 1979.

Thom is a partner in the law firm of Boggan and Thom and a graduate of Princeton University and Yale Law School.

A state judge ruled recently that New York's Mayor, Edward Koch, exceeded his executive powers when he issued a directive prohibiting organizations that do business with the city from discriminating against homosexuals.

Three religious groups providing social services to the needy under contract to the city had gone to court asking for a ruling on the constitutionality of the directive. The Salvation Army and the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York, which had signed similar contracts, had said that they would end the social services rather than renew contracts requiring them to obey all executive orders. Agudath Israel of America also joined the court action.

Koch said the city will appeal the decision. He also said he will ask the City Council to pass its own legislation in case the city loses its appeal. But he acknowledged that the Council has consistently refused to pass a broader measure banning discrimination against homosexuals in hiring, housing, and public places.

LOS ANGELES

The Los Angeles Shanti Foundation is a volunteer counseling service which provides on-going emotional support to persons with life-threatening illnesses. This includes counseling, companionship, and emotional support.

In March 1983, the Shanti Foundation began providing help to persons with AIDS. Due to the nature of AIDS, the demand for these services has been increasing steadily.

The Los Angeles Shanti Foundation is a non-profit organization. Funding of the program comes through contributions from individuals and groups who are supportive of the work of the Foundation.

Shanti needs donations from individuals and organizations that can contribute time, skills, or money in order to continue its work. The Foundation has no specific religious affiliation. "Shanti" is pronounced with a broad "a" and is a Sanskrit word translated as "inner peace."

To contact The Shanti Foundation, write 1752 North Fuller Avenue, Los Angeles, CA 90046.

WILLIAM TELL REVIEWS:

SAILOR IN THE WILD and HOT OFF THE PRESS

In Sailor In The Wild, while on leave from his submarine, a sailor backpacks into the high country where he encounters more than Mother Nature. As a matter of fact, his encounters seem to lean toward the two-legged hunky types, including a forest ranger.

"Sailor" quickly shifts to another incident in which two buddies initiate their "straight" friend into the delights of gay sex. The straight friend protests at first but soon becomes a willing participant in a most lively three-way.

Our sailor resurfaces in another segment that reunites him with the ranger. The two go on a picnic; and after sharing a few beers, their relationship becomes more than platonic. The ranger is easily cajoled into a sexual experience that keeps him on his back and belly for hours.

Later in the film, we find our sailor on a secluded beach with three friends. Their immediate problem is that they must bed down for the night, short one sleeping bag. No matter, they draw straws. Our sailor loses the draw which doubles him up with an amorous, well-endowed hunk. The remaining two in this beach party express shock at the sailor's nighttime behavior, but soon find themselves willing participants after being assured by the sailor that it's all in good fun.

Our second film, Hot Off The Press, centers around the pending sale of "Heidi," a German press. Many potential buyers view the machine, but their interests are sidetracked as they get it on with the reluctant sellers. This could have been named "Off With Their Pants," as most of the action consists of vigorous tongue action.

These films are available for rent on VHS cassettes at Films for Days, downtown Sacramento.

by Rick Spring

Fun, fun, fun was had by all at the anniversary party for Don and Bill, which started at Gene's Saloon, then moved to the Cabaret and ended up at the Shamrock for breakfast. Tom and Dale who also celebrated their anniversary had a great party at Gene's Saloon. (Thanks to both couples for a wonderful times!)

October also promises to be a lot of fun. On Friday the 12th and Saturday the 13th, the Octoberfest Weekend will take place. The weekend will start off with a party at Gene's Saloon on Friday and will continue on Saturday at the Cabaret. Everyone always has a good time at these shindigs.

Of course, Halloween weekend is coming up. Once again, it will start at Gene's Saloon on the 26th. On the 27th, the scene of the action will be the Cabaret. There will be festive Halloween surprises at both parties. We all hope you can join us.

Come to Clear Lake to relax. Gene, who lives and works in Lakeport, enjoys the lake and loves the hot tub.

CHICO

by Derek

This month, instead of my usual report on our fair city, I want to tell you about the proudest day in my life.

It was Sunday, June 24. It was still dark at 5 AM when nine of us loaded blankets, pads, refreshments, and ourselves into a van rented for the day by members of the New World Theater.

Trying to make ourselves as comfortable as possible, which wasn't easy, we were soon on our way to San Francisco.

This day had been planned for months and as the day came closer, our emotions became greater. This was the first time I had attended the Gay Freedom Day Parade. I felt jubilant but at the same time nervous. The nervousness was caused by my participating in the Parade with the rest of my friends as a marching contingent representing Chico.

With Bloody Marys for breakfast and the excitement, the trip to San Francisco seemed very short. After arriving in the city at 9:30 AM and finding our location just south of First Street, we stretched our legs and prepared our banners. The wait for the parade to organize seemed endless, but it was interesting to watch the other marchers and floats get prepared. As we waited, more people from Chico arrived and joined us.

At about 12:30, our number was called and we took our position in the Parade near the middle. I was very nervous carrying our lead banner along with Lural, Norma, and Paul as we started to march toward Market Street. We joked to relieve our tension. Finally, we were at the turn onto Market Street, the actual starting point of the Parade, and with a deep breath we made the turn and began our march to the Civic Center. All nervousness left us at that moment, as the crowd cheered us on. It was fantastic! I felt so proud to be a part of this great event and prouder still of all the gay women and men who took part in it. I have never felt so at home and at peace with myself as I did that day.

By the time we reached the Civic Center, our group had increased to over thirty and the crowd was massive. It was an overwhelming sight to see so many brothers and sisters in one place. I have not felt alone in the world since that experience.

The rest of the day was party time for all of us. We enjoyed the sights and sounds of San Francisco and headed for home at midnight. When we arrived in Chico, the van was filled with happy sleeping bodies and we all made our way safely home. Let me repeat that I will never forget that day as long as I live and it is and will remain the proudest day in my life. Thanks to every one of you. I love you all.

FANTASY CAPSULE

by Mark M. Forston

Once Upon A Wish

Have you ever had a fantasy? Have you dreamed about a secret wish? Did it ever come true? Well, it's possible for a fantasy to come true.

Life had been being pretty boring. Going to the same old haunts, looking for love. In short, things were just a drag. It seemed as if nothing good was ever going to happen.

One day my imagination began to take hold, and a wonderful fantasy filled my mind. It was about that perfect man we all want to meet and go to bed with. He was fashioned in my mind: cute, sweet, thoughtful, romantic! Of course, he would have a great body. I stored that image for safe keeping.

One day a friend asked me to accompany him to the Russian River resort area in California for the weekend. Since I had never been there, I thought: What do I have to lose? I accepted and off we went.

It was a magic place where all one's fantasies might be fulfilled. It was a warm Sunday, and a gentle breeze stirred the pine trees and filled the air with an intoxicating aroma. A perfect romantic setting.

At the tea dance that afternoon I saw him, my fantasy. I was standing by a door that led outside. He walked past me, and I felt a rush. He looked into my eyes; I looked back. The signals were clear. He went outside for a moment, then returned to a spot where we gazed at each other for only a moment. I walked over to him, asked him to dance, and the magic began.

We rode away from the resort later that night, me clinging to him on the back of his motorcycle, whizzing down those velvet roads with only the stars above, so bright you could reach up and touch them. That was a night of love. Pure ecstasy, a fantasy come true.

It may have been the time, the moment, or just the romantic atmosphere. But I would rather believe that it was magic. It just proves that fantasies can come true.
